

He restores my soul.
Healing the broken hearted.

Dear Friends

In order to help address the legacy of the conflict and move forward to a better future, the organisation 'Healing Through Remembering' in Northern Ireland has proposed that there be a Day of Private Reflection on 21 June 2007 which would provide an opportunity for people to reflect individually at home or at work and as a family or a group. In place of our regular monthly meeting in June we in Restoration Ministries will host an event at our regular time of 8.00 pm in solidarity with all those who are remembering on this day.

We would love to see many of our 'friends' here in Restoration House on that evening. As a ministry we would like to pause, to remember, to acknowledge where we are at and give thanks for new beginnings. This is not to diminish all the long years of hurt and journeying in the shadow of violence and fear. There is much still to be done in the whole area of healing and of building the peace. For those of you who cannot be physically with us we ask that you join with us in spirit.

In the midst of the 'troubles' people came to this place (as others went to similar places of hope). Many of you came or kept in close touch. The question that is being asked now is 'What do we feel we need to do in these days? Do we as people of faith, need to do more?'

We really need you, 'our friends', as we embark on this exciting stage of our journey together but we also appreciate that some of you have found other challenging areas of service. If this is the case you might welcome this opportunity to let us know. Whatever your decision we thank all our 'friends' for your loving prayerful and financial support over the years.

May June the 21st be a day of healing and remembering for us all.

Maya Angelou,
